Federal Housing Finance Board

Dear Karen Walter:

I write to oppose the Proposed Rule published by the Federal Housing Finance Board (FHFB) on Wednesday, April 16, 2008.

There are many hard working low income individuals that do not have the resources to save for a downpayment on their home. Housing counselors work with these individuals to educate them on the homeownership process to assist them as they select their mortgage product. During the tough times many are facing with rising gas prices and the cost of goods on the rise, these low income individuals that have stable employment histories and have protected their credit should have a resource to assist them as they look to secure a home.

The above referenced proposal rewards members for making nontraditional loans with interest rate risks. Members can restructure loans on their own without removing a critical resource for asset building through homeownership for low income families.

The loans as described are currently performing. They are threatened with foreclosure due to imminent higher rates. Banks own these loans and can choose not to raise the interest rate.

The FHLBanks have other sources of funds and should use those funds and demonstrate their impact before tapping into a reliable source of homeownership already seen as a critical part of the pipeline for affordable homeownership.

AHP resources provide needed match funds to leverage local homeownership programs. AHP funds complement city and state downpayment grants and loans, Individual Development Accounts, and personal savings.

The proposed rule permits reallocation of AHP through June 30, 2011. This effectively diminishes resource for new, first-time low-income homeowners at a time where it is more difficult to get mortgages.

The FHLBanks have an incredible amount of resources to aid families facing foreclosure, it is unfortunate that the first resource the Finance Board encourages them to use is AHP, "the crown jewel of the System."

Sincerely,

Martina Grimm
